FOR THE WHOLE FAM

“We started Curated Nest because we knew there was a gap in the market: a traditional interior design approach of high-end luxury would not work for new or growing families,” says Curated Nest co-founder Erin Coren, who runs the family-focused interior design firm with Lina Galvão. “Interior design, other than DIY approaches, just wasn’t geared towards functional, family-friendly homes, and we had plenty of ideas of how to fulfill that as busy parents ourselves.” Based in Rye Brook, NY, the pair work to design homes that are as practical as they are luxurious and stylish. A go-to tip? “We often pull out the ‘prettier’ or quieter or smaller toys from the main play area and incorporate those into the traditionally more adult spaces, like wooden blocks in a decorative bowl,” says Coren. “Then, we find beautiful ways to store them. The key is a concealed form of storage that still allows the child their things,” she says, like decorative sideboard or basket. curatednest.com

CLASSIC—AND INSPIRING

Launched in 2016, Heidi Carey Designs features everything from robes and pajamas to accessories and tableware. Designer Heidi Carey has always believed in selling classic styles to customers at a reasonable price—from her days at Ralph Lauren and Vera Wang to designing her own dress line for Bergdorf Goodman, HK Designs, to founding Heidi Carey Designs. “There is a level of humility in the designs themselves that always remembers it’s the woman wearing them who is special, not the piece itself,” she says. Now, she’s sharing her tips on a forthcoming podcast called How We’re Building This.

Inspired by the podcast, How I Built This, Carey says, “Inspiration only gets us so far, so within the podcast I will be sharing exactly how we are building the business with all the tools and people who have helped along the way.” For summer, she’s loving her new bamboo and seaside prints. “On the new product front, I have a new bathrobe style, featuring my signature scalloped edge detailing, that is unique and elegant.” heidicarey.com
